Lizana named Chamber's "Citizen of the Year"

BY D.C. HARVILL
Bay St. Louis Fire Chief Andrew Lizana was surprised Friday evening when the Hancock County Chamber of Commerce awarded him its prestigious Citizen of the Year Award in recognition of his civic-minded activities.

"He's a shy person, a very hard worker and very dedicated to the community," said Sherlyn Breland, the chamber's special projects coordinator, when announcing the award before a packed house at the Diamondhead Country Club.

Lizana, 59, joined the Bay St. Louis Fire Department in 1970, becoming chief in 1972.

The Chamber cited his personal involvement in civic and church activities as a softball and basketball for the St. Rose Catholic Church Youth Organization and as secretary of the Knights of Peter Claver.

Lizana is recognized for his efforts as a teacher of firefighting techniques, having trained many of the firefighters in on the Coast.

Foremost among his accomplishments is the Annual Doll and Toy Fund campaign, he began in 1971, which provides toys each Christmas for needy children in Hancock County.

More than 1000 children received gifts through the program last year.

A native of Bay St. Louis, Lizana and his wife of 39 years, the former Betty Fairconnetue, have 11 children and 3 grandchildren.

Governor Ray Mabus was the featured speaker at the banquet, expounding on the need for educational reform in Mississippi.

"Education must be more of a family affair. We have to get the community involved...and we must do it without a tax increase. We can do it with what we've got, but we've got to have some innovative solutions," Mabus said.

The Chamber's Dick Kosbab Memorial Award was presented to Molly Weems, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Fred Weems of Bay St. Louis.

The award is presented annually to a student who has exhibited outstanding character and excellence in civic and academic achievement.

Christmas parade heralds arrival of Santa in Bay

The Annual Hancock County Christmas Parade and tree lighting ceremony sponsored by the Hancock County Chamber of Commerce will begin at 7 p.m., Thursday.

Grand marshal for the parade will be renowned New Orleans musician Pete Fountain, who owns a home in Bay St. Louis.

The event which will feature the arrival of Santa Claus on a fire engine, will include the Keesler Drum and Bugle Corp, area schools, Scout troops and floats.

Any civic or community organization wishing to participate in the parade should contact the Chamber by Tuesday, according to Chamber Director Libby Roland.

The parade will begin at the corner of Highway 90 and Beach Boulevard. It will travel along Beach to Main Street, then will proceed along Main to the Hancock County Courthouse where it will end.

Accident victim dies in Gulfport

A Perkinston man injured in an auto accident in north Hancock last Saturday evening died Thursday in Memorial Hospital in Gulfport.

Francis Greg Harriel, 25, suffered damage to his brain stem when the 1985 Ford Mustang driven by his cousin, Joseph Harriel, ran off Highway 603 approximately 11 miles north of Kiln, hitting a culvert.

According to a Mississippi Highway Patrol spokesman, the car became airborne, flipped several times and landed upside down.

Harriel, who was "said to be brain dead when transported to Memorial Hospital" underwent surgery Saturday night for his injuries.

BPC contains waste thought hazardous at industrial park

BY D.C. HARVILL

The contents of drums left on the loading dock of a new defunct plant at Stennis Industrial Park are being analyzed to determine if they are hazardous, and the proper method of disposal a Mississippi Bureau of Pollution Control spokesman said Friday.

The contents of the drums, at a building formerly occupied by Thermal Associates, are unknown. But they are thought to contain acidic material contaminated with heavy metals, according to Darrell Pierson, environmental analyst for the BPC's Emergency Services branch.

Thermal Associates manufactured heat sinks, devices used to help dissipate heat generated by electronics equipment.

Two of the 10 drums were leaking, Pierson said. One had been shot with a .22 caliber bullet and the other was leaking due to high pressure inside the drum.

The Hancock County Port and Harbor Commission, under whose auspices the park is operated, contacted the bureau shortly before Thanksgiving and a cleanup was begun at that time, Pierson said.

"After several unsuccessful attempts to contact (the company's president, Dick Kiley) the port commission thought the company was going to abandon the drums. We were able to contact him and it seems he is not going to abandon them, but he could have acted sooner," Pierson said.

"We tried to get in touch with Kiley, but things weren't getting done quickly as we would have liked, so we contacted the Bureau of Pollution Control. Its out of my hand now and I'm glad it is," said Harold "Buz" Olsen, Port and Harbor director.

Another 55 gallons of unidentified substance was pumped from a containment box in the floor of the building. The liquid was very acidic and had a chemical odor, according to Pierson.

"It is probably Oakite, a strong acid (used in electroplating operations). From talking to Kiley, we believe that is what it is. It could contain heavy metals," he said.

The bureau has hired a Louisiana firm to contain the wastes at a cost of $1,642. Kiley has agreed to reimburse the state, according to Pierson.

The two leaking drums have been "overpacked" and all ten have been relocated to a cement pad down the road from the site and covered with plastic. The chemicals will be properly disposed of after they have been identified, Pierson said.

The barrels' contents "present no health threat now since we have contained them," Pierson said.

Acids and heavy metals in the soil can contaminate ground water but, according to Pierson there is no indication that has happened at the park. He is having soil samples analyzed as a precaution, however.

According to BPC's file on Thermal Associates, shortly after the company began operation at Stennis, it was found in violation of water quality regulations.

"He (Kiley) was discharging Oakite solution through a garden hose into the sewer system. He didn't have a permit at all," Pierson said.

Information gathered by Pierson will determine if Kiley will be penalized, but that decision will be made by others within the bureau, he said.

County agrees to help expand Meology project

BY DENA BISNETTE

The Meology anti-drug abuse program is taking a new step in Hancock County, with some help from the board of supervisors.

Alicia Ellis, Meology coordinator, and Mississippi Coast

Crime Commission representative Joe Hancock appeared before the board Thursday to ask for $2,500 to finance a pilot project that would extend the reach of the program.

Meology is already offered to sixth graders at schools in Hancock County and is financed through confiscated drug money in other coastal counties. In Hancock County, the decision to provide money for Meology is made by the board of supervisors.

County approves contract for development, zoning plan

BY DENA BISNETTE

The Hancock County Board of Supervisors has taken its second move on a comprehensive development plan and zoning ordinance for the county.

The first move was last month, when the supervisors approved a resolution from the county planning commission, which in its present state deals mostly with flood control and subdivision regulations.

The county presently has no comprehensive development plan, other than a master plan for revitalization of the sand beaches here. There is also no zoning.

On Thursday, the board agreed to a cost-reimbursable contract of not more than $39,980 with South Mississippi Planning and Development District.

Under the contract, the district will prepare the plan, which is expected to take about a year, district representative Jeff Taylor said. Completion of the ordinance itself will take about six months more.

In preparing the plan, the district plans to save on some of the cost by using information already available through the Hancock County Tax Collector and Assessor's Office.

Peoples Federal Christmas Clubs total $86,142

"Peoples Federal Savings Bank is pleased to announce our Christmas Club members received their checks totaling $86,142 on Nov. 20," stated David Treutel, president.

"We are one of the earliest of the local institutions to get our Christmas Club checks to our savers," he continued. "That way our customers are able to make the special pre-Christmas sales at the stores and save even more money."

In 1990, Peoples Federal Savings Bank will continue to pay 6 percent interest on completed Christmas Club savings.

"Anyone interested in beginning a Christmas Club account may come to any one of Peoples Federal's four locations for information on this easy way to have a good 1990 Christmas," said Treutel.

NAACP announces first Distinguished Service program

Calvin R. Smith, president of the NAACP Hancock County Branch, is announcing the organization's first annual Distinguished Service Awards Program to be held Saturday, Jan. 13 from 7 to 10 p.m. at the Hancock County Fairgrounds, and he asks for public participation.

"The NAACP has identified a need for such a program," Smith said, "and believes that this is the most effective way to publicize to the general population the high-caliber of dedicated volunteers we have in our county."

"For many years the clergy, professionals, military, volunteers and other groups have serviced our community, often times without recognition. We also realize that this service is rendered in a better quality than in Hancock County and that it is not recognized."

Members of our community are what they do in their lives," Smith said. "Therefore, the Hancock County Branch of the NAACP invites you to join us in our first Distinguished Service Awards Program (Formerly Mother of the Year Supper Theatre), he added. Tickets are available at $10 per person.

Awards will be presented in seven categories: Professional

Scientific, Professional, Other, Religion, Volunteer, Military, Arts and Media. Nominations for candidates in these categories are being accepted until Dec. 10.

To enter someone, call the NAACP office at 467-0470 for further details.

The question of who can be nominated has arisen on several occasions, Smith said, and he knows all county residents to know that this program is exactly what it says, "all county residents."

In addition to the actual awards ceremony, there will be a buffet dinner and entertainment. On the program will be Bobby Steele, Shanna Steele, a youngest member of the NAACP, and Mousekitties, and a lot of the NAACP's "Air Force" members. The NAACP's "Air Force" members are: St. Rose de Lima, Robert Weaver and Philip Williams; the A. J. Dancer, Ann Wilkerson; Sherrie Harrington; Angelique Bell and a host of other local artists will also entertain.

Governor Mabus and other state representatives have been invited. Local city officials will also participate and prepare welcome addresses for the souvenir programs that will be available that evening.

Smith has pitched in to make this program a grand success, said Smith. For instance, WBSL Radio, and WXXV-TV, along with Milton Travis of Spirit Records, will handle the publicity. Eddie Vaughn, a resident of Waveland, designed the program covers, and local merchants are purchasing advertisements.

Roy Estess, director of Stennis Space Center, has said he is encouraging those employees to participate. National sponsors have also been contacted. The NAACP has also extended invitations to the Hancock County Chamber of Commerce.

"The members of the NAACP have accepted the challenge of this monumental task with vigor and overwhelming enthusiasm. Now we look to the residents of Hancock County to join us in this endeavor," said Smith.

"I guarantee the quality and quantity of this outstanding program," said Smith, "and I trust that all of the residents of Hancock County will want to pay tribute to those who are definitely working for a better quality of life in our county."

For ticket information, call 467-0470. Nominations may be forwarded to: NAACP, P.O. Box 125, Bay St. Louis, MS 39520.

NASA's Smith addresses retired federal employees

BY DENA BISNETTE

Gerald Smith, deputy director of John C. Stennis Space Center, cites misinformation as the public's main reason for questioning NASA's intentions to locate its Advanced Solid Rocket Motor (ASRM) testing program in Hancock County.

Smith, addressing a meeting of Buccaneer Chapter 1729 of National Association of Retired Federal Employees Thursday, explained that NASA's experience with other solid rocket motors has provided a good background for the project.

"We at NASA are very confident that we can make the tests without environmental damage or endangerment of anyone's health," he said. Smith has worked with other types of solid rocket motors, having been named manager of the booster program after the space shuttle Challenger was destroyed by an explosion.

The ASRM, he explained, is the direct result of a redesigning program that began after the accident.

The tests of the ASRM are proposed for a late 1992 start-up, with eight tests scheduled during each of the first two years and two tests per year after that. The tests themselves are similar to the test firing which have taken place at Stennis during the shuttle program and will last two minutes each.

Smith explained that an environmental impact statement prepared by NASA in preparation for the project is being critiqued by a consortium of several universities and some private concerns. In addition, the project requires both air quality and wetlands permits because NASA must comply with state and federal environmental quality regulations.

He told NARFE members that since 1964, no negative environmental impact has been found in Florida in that area around Kennedy Space Center, where 143 vehicles using solid propellants have been launched since that year. Of those, 31 were space shuttle flights.

In addition, environmental information regarding an area around a Utah site where 22 solid rocket motor firings have been completed, added to computer models, reinforced the findings in Florida.

According to Smith, the combustion byproducts from the firings ride a thermal plume to 20,000 feet above the test stand, then become aerosol and dissipate over a large area. Weather conditions at Stennis will be monitored to make certain that the byproducts will dissipate.

Some artificial means have been developed to help assure dissipation, according to statements made by Rebecca McCaleb, who prepared the environmental impact statement and was featured in a six-minute film Smith showed NARFE members.

Smith said the publicity generated for the project by the controversy may be helpful in the long run.

"The publicity will give the people in the community a better understanding of what is going on at NASA, more than ever before," he said.

He added that the redesign resulting in the ASRM will allow a shuttle to handle larger payloads, thereby making fewer launches necessary.

In addition, Smith cited a positive economic impact on the four-county area from which most Stennis employees are hired as a plus for the ASRM. However, he did comment that some "outsiders" would have to be brought in to handle high technology jobs.

When a spectator asked about the allegations that the tests will increase the amount of aluminum because one of the byproducts is aluminum oxide,

Smith cited inconclusive scientific evidence regarding aluminum's link with Alzheimer's Disease and other disorders.

The majority of the VHS films are from 10 to 20 minutes in length.

Several of the films have already been shown to students at local schools and at the Hancock Medical Center too expectant parents.

Polozola said, "The task force will begin monthly film showings in evenings along with a guest speaker starting in January."

Films are available for church groups, teachers, civic organizations, homemakers, and concerned parents.

The films are geared to parents, parents and children and also children, Polozola stated.

The Hancock Community Task Force for Youth is sponsored by and is an agency of the United Way of Hancock County and also coordinates the Pierre the Pelican program for expecting parents.

"QUOTABLE QUOTES"

By Ellis C. Cuevas

Congratulations are in order for Bay St. Louis Fire Chief Andrew Lizana who was named the Hancock County Chamber of Commerce's Citizen of the Year.

Lizana received the prestigious award on Friday night at the chamber's annual Christmas banquet held at Diamondhead's Country Club.

As most of you know, Chief Lizana has been very active in many activities in the county over the years. One of his biggest projects is the annual Hancock County Doll and Toy Drive.

The award to Lizana was presented to him as he did not know who was going to receive the award until the presentation was made.

Mayor Edward Farnsworth was the one getting Lizana to the banquet without giving him any clues.

Lizana has been very active in his church, coached youth softball and basketball, and serves as secretary for the Knights of Peter Chapter council, among many other community endeavors.

As a fire chief, he has personally trained many of the firefighters now working in most of the fire companies in the county.

While I was congratulating Chief Lizana on the award he had just received, he was talking to me about his upcoming Doll and Toy Drive.

I feel he is very deserving of the award.

Governor Ray Mabus was the guest speaker for the event. Libby Roland, executive director told me the banquet was booked and she had to turn many folks away who would have liked to attend.

Governor Mabus' primary focus was on a subject close to the hearts of Hancock County residents, and that is education.

As a matter of fact, he had to leave immediately after his speech to an engagement in California.

He is one of the few governors to speak on education at that meeting.

The governor is also very concerned about education and is looking down the road to the year 2000 for six-year-old boys and girls to be able to read at the turn of the century.

We have already heard from the governor and education and I am sure we will hear much more in the months and years to come.

Santa will be coming to town on Friday at 7 p.m. for the annual Christmas parade and tree lighting ceremony.

This event is sponsored by the Hancock County Chamber of Commerce in conjunction with the Hancock County Sheriff's Office and the Bay St. Louis and Waveland.

Santa's visit will give youngsters an opportunity to tell the visitor from the North their wishes for Christmas.

Grand Marshal Pete Fountain, world famous musician, will be the first in the parade.

As many of you know, the New Orleans clarinetist has a 'get away from it all' residence in Bay St. Louis.

The parade will be held on the corner of US-90 and Beach Boulevard, then Beach Boulevard to Main Street and will end at the Hancock County Courthouse.

We hope to see you at the parade.

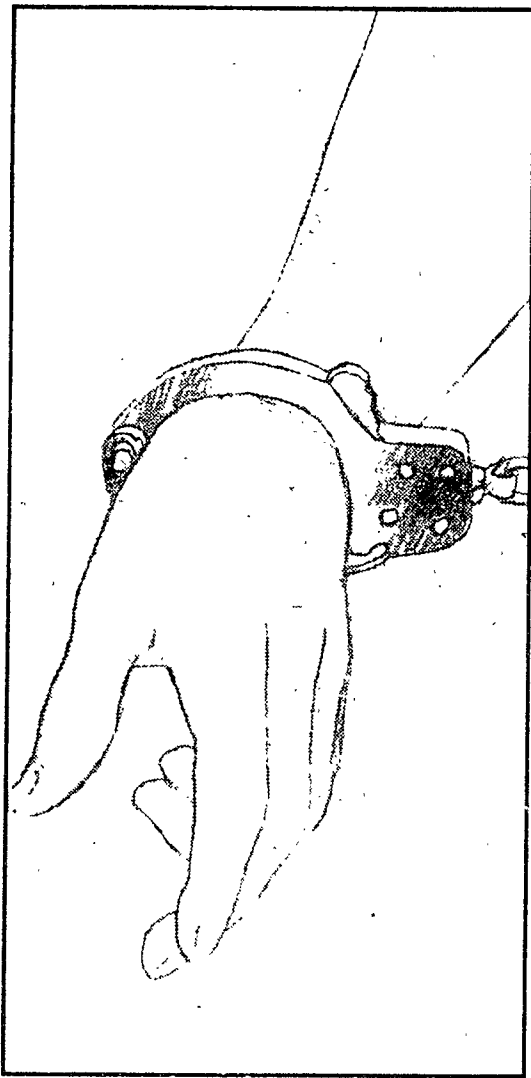

We have made special arrangements to publish some Letters to Santa and forward them to him at his North Pole home.

We will be publishing some of the letters we receive before Christmas.

WASHINGTON REPORT

By Senator Thad Cochran

Senator praises committee approval of voc-ed bill

Senator Thad Cochran says he is pleased with the emphasis the Senate Labor and Human Resources committee has placed on vocational education following unanimous committee approval of a major reauthorization bill recently.

"Vocational-technical education is an important link to career opportunities for many young people in Mississippi and across the nation," said Cochran, a member of the Senate panel. "Quality vocational programs are vital in our efforts to keep America globally competitive."

The Senate panel adopted a $1.5 billion reauthorization of the Carl D. Perkins Vocational Education Act, a sixty-one percent increase over 1989 levels. Senator Cochran authored a provision in the bill providing $100 million to fund a "Supplemental Grants for Areas of Greatest Need" program. The provision authorizes the secretary of education to distribute grants to states in greatest need, based on high poverty levels, unemployment and number of high school dropouts. "The supplemental grant program will allow us to focus substantially more federal education dollars to address the special needs of states like Mississippi," Cochran said.

Cochran was also a primary force behind the inclusion of federal funding for a "Tech-Prep" program to provide federal resources for technical education programs that link secondary school and community college instruction. The program encourages states to develop comprehensive, coordinated curriculum of math, science and technology courses.

The provision adopted by the committee sets aside a minimum of five percent of the state's federal allocation to fund "Tech-Prep."

"Tech-Prep is popular with Mississippi community and junior colleges," Cochran said. "This legislation adds federal dollars to a model program the Mississippi vocational education community has tried and found successful."

Cochran held federal hearings in Biloxi earlier this year to examine "tech-prep" programs in Mississippi.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Children need recognition

To the Editor,
I would like to express my feelings on behalf of all the children who were not recognized in the paper as Honor Roll students.

My child is overlooked because he works below grade level, which only means he does the same work as the other students in his grade but at a slower speed. At this level he makes A's or A's and B's, but because he's working below grade level the public school system does not recognize this. Our state is so concerned about reforming our education. Children should be recognized for their accomplishments regardless if they are fast or slow.

If the child is working at his/her level and making Honor Roll grades then give him something for his hard work.

FROM THE CAPITOL

By Governor Ray Mabus

Mississippians express pride in their children's achievements

Ask anyone in Mississippi, and they'll bend your ear about their children, and that's the way it should be. Our pride in our children tells us that they are the best and can compete with kids anywhere in the world. You and I know that God did not draw a line around Mississippi and say, "Your children are different, they cannot compete."

Mississippi's BEST—Better Education for Success Tomorrow, will unleash that great potential that is within all of us. Mississippi's BEST will make that dream of international competitiveness a reality by the year 2001.

A key goal of BEST is to make sure that our elementary and secondary students can compete with students in other developed countries. BEST calls for more technology in the classroom, more innovation, sound school buildings and school teachers who are treated as professionals.

Cheap labor was once a friend of Mississippi. Today, cheap labor is a ticket to nowhere. When it comes to cheap labor, Malaysia can beat us, the Philippines can beat us, India can beat us, and a lot of other countries can beat us.

High-paying jobs follow highly skilled workers, and that is why BEST provides for more state-of-the-art technology in Mississippi classrooms. Not only will technology mean our students will be computer literate, but technology will open up opportunities that have never been available or possible before.

BEST would create a Corporation for Educational Innovation—a special group designed to infuse innovation into Mississippi schools. Unlike any group now in existence, the Corporation can draw resources from business, higher education, community groups, associations and other groups.

Technology and innovation will not help if a student's school building is leaking, too hot in the summer or too cold in the winter. Being able to compete means have the tools—including the school buildings—to compete.

BEST would establish a School Finance and Capital Needs program that will allow school districts to apply for state assistance to repair, renovate, air condition or remove asbestos from schools.

If we want to compete, we have to treat teachers like the professionals that they are. That is why BEST creates a statewide health insurance pool for teachers, and helps keep their salaries competitive with teachers elsewhere.

Much of BEST seeks to make sure that students—regardless of their abilities—go as far as their talents and an excellent education will let them. But they will only happen if we keep them in school. That is why BEST contains a series of programs to slash the dropout rate in half by the year 2001.

The School-based Dropout Prevention Program requires schools to develop plans to lower their individual dropout rates. And the Alliance for Families Program gets the family, employers, the church and other community institutions involved.

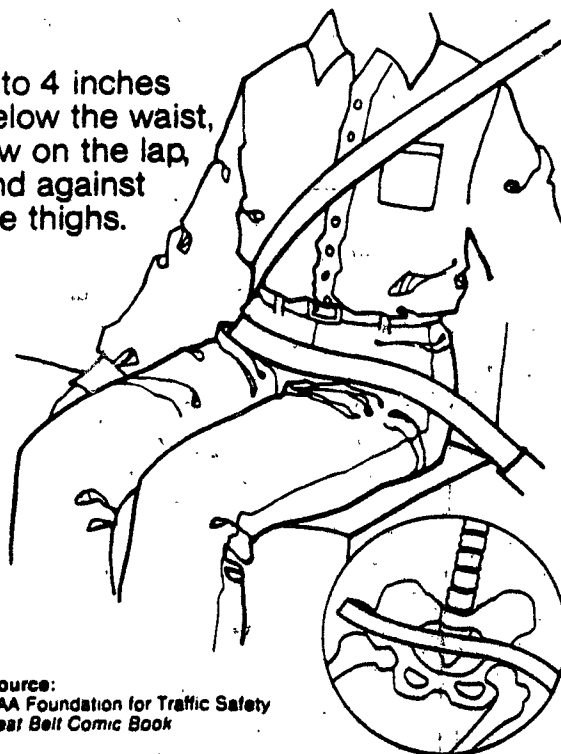

The "Make it Tough to Drop Out" Program says, if you are under 18 and you drop out—no diver's license, period.

And the Hope Program is designed to give students hope for the future by telling them as early as the eighth grade that if they stay in school, the state will help them get job training or access to higher education at a community college or university.

We can compete with anyone anywhere. That is what BEST is all about, helping Mississippi to be the best.

Life in a small town is better than in a city

The other day while I was chatting with two ladies I had just photographed, the conversation turned to a pleasant topic—life in a small town.

I often have people ask me whether I could make better money working in a city, and then they usually ask why I remain in a small town if I want to write for a living.

The answer to the first question is easy. I could make better money, but I would probably spend more because it costs more to live there.

The second question is easier. I like living in small towns.

I thought about moving to a city once and had picked out four of them, two in Texas and two in Georgia.

Knowing several of my college classmates went to Dallas and Houston and did well in their careers, I considered both cities. One of my best friends is from Atlanta and he described it as being interesting. The fourth city was Savannah, a beautiful, historic place I had visited once and liked.

I was actually saving money to try to go to one of these places at one point, but I changed my mind and blew the money on my favorite hobby—graduate school.

The decision was easy. Working in a city might be better, but I simply decided that I like living in small towns. There are certain things which happen in them that don't happen in cities.

In a city, you might know your mail carrier, but if somebody writes a two-year-old address on a letter, you may not get it. I got one Thursday and it didn't even have a forwarding sticker on it. I've also received Christmas cards with old addresses crossed out and the word "Echo" written on the envelopes.

When you visit cities, even smaller ones, and somebody touches you in a store or mall, the best thing to do is immediately check to see if your pocket has been picked. In a place the size of Bay St. Louis, Waveland or Pass Christian, you're more likely feel the tug on your sleeve and turn to be welcomed by a friend's smiling child.

It's not likely in a city, either, that the person who prepares the sandwich you're about to buy would remember which customers don't like mayonnaise or want extra pickles, without having to ask.

In more exclusive shops in cities, customers can say they are hunting for a particular antique or other item and leave a phone number for the store manager to call if he locates one. The manager might call if he wants to make a little money, but in a place like this, he calls even if he hears that the store down the street has found what you want.

In cities, nobody seems to know much about their neighbors or want to know. In a small town, even the neighbor who is afraid of your dog will call you to tell you the animal is loose before he calls the pound.

If a car breaks down on a city street, people might help you push it out of the way because they're in a hurry—then they'll leave you to catch a taxicab. If it happens in an out-of-the-way place, you'd better be careful about who you approach for assistance. In a small town, someone you know will come along before five cars have passed.

Bank tellers and store cashiers in a city aren't the same as the ones in small towns. The small-town people get to know their customers, and they'll look the other way when you forge your husband's name on a check because he's on a three-week business trip and your own account is running low.

Living in a small town means you won't be elected an officer in your club if you miss the election meeting, as long as you send a message with another member, and that you will get the committee spot you'd rather have.

The difference is that small town people don't isolate each other and city people do. There are other more tangible advantages, such as less traffic, lower cost of living or maybe even being able to live near relatives.

Somehow, I think the people make all the difference. Transplant the attitudes these folks have to a city, and I might consider moving there.

SHOPPING UP A STORM

By Katy McGuire
Caire

It's been true "soup and stew weather" these past few days, hasn't it? There's something about the aroma of a savory pot of soup or stew simmering on the stove that brings a sense of contentment along with the appetite.

Going along with that idea, our local supermarkets are offering good buys in heavy beef for soup or stew, along with all the vegetables for either.

If you choose some of the boneless beef stew meat on sale at National, you might want to cook up this dish, for a relatively inexpensive "company" dinner. You could make it extra-special with some fresh mushrooms from Delchamps, as well, along with some sour cream, on special at Jitney Jungle.

SPECIAL STROGANOFF STEW

1 1/2 lbs. boneless beef for stew (2-inch pieces or so)
3 Tbsp. corn oil
1 cup sliced mushrooms
3 Tbsp. four
2 1/2 cups boiling water
1/4 cup minced onion
1/4 tsp. minced garlic
1 beef bouillon cube
2 Tbsp. Worcestershire sauce
1 cup dairy sour cream
2 Tbsp. tomato paste
2 Tbsp. chopped parsley
2 to 3 cups hot cooked broad noodles

Heat the oil in a heavy saucepan, add the meat, a few pieces at a time, and brown well on all sides. Remove meat and set aside. Add the mushrooms to the pan and saute for five minutes, then stir in the flour and cook, stirring for two minutes.

Gradually stir in the water, onion, garlic, bouillon cube, one tablespoonful of the Worcestershire sauce, and the reserved meat. Bring to a boil, then reduce the heat and simmer, covered until the meat is tender (1 1/2 hours, usually).

Combine the sour cream, tomato paste and the remaining Worcestershire sauce, and stir into the meat, then stir in the parsley. Serve over the noodles. (Six to eight servings).

—from Johanna Blinn's
Thrifty Man's Cookbook

Winn-Dixie has special prices on lean ground round and ground chuck, and Delchamps offers "Bonus Buys" in lean ground beef in 5-pound amounts; so why not cook up some hamburgers for ever-so-quick suppers these busy days?

But, don't just hurriedly broil or fry the burgers, and slap 'em into buns; try a few tasty variations instead. Years ago, enjoying a snack at the famed Dinty

Moore's restaurant in New York City, I learned that the cooks there sprinkled the hamburgers with sugar to sharpen the flavor, before broiling or grilling them.

One of my favorite ways of cooking hamburgers is to marinate the shaped and seasoned (pepper, cayenne, chopped onion and celery, and what have you) patties in a cup of red wine or Italian salad dressing for at least an hour beforehand. Then, I melt two tablespoons of butter or margarine in a heavy pan, add two tablespoons of the marinade, and pan broil the burgers. Remove the hamburgers and set aside, add a bit more marinade to the pan, swishing thoroughly around the pan to take up the meat drippings and those tasty "burnings" at the bottom of the pan. Pour over the burgers, on bun or bread as you like.

Or, I like to mash an avocado (Jitney Jungle has really nice ones) and season it with salt and pepper, and a dash or so of hot pepper sauce, crumble bacon into the mixture (or imitation bacon bits) and spoon this atop broiled hamburgers just before serving. Another tasty tip: Sandwich two thinner burgers together with a filling of crumbled blue or cheddar cheese before cooking!

Pork sausage, mild, medium or hot as you wish, is on special—in bulk rolls—at Winn-Dixie and Delchamps. Here's:

SAUSAGE BREAKFAST CASSEROLE
6 slices bread
Butter or margarine
1 lb. bulk pork sausage
1 1/2 cups shredded cheddar cheese (6 oz. of cheese)
6 eggs, beaten
2 cups half and half
Pepper, salt as desired
Remove crusts from the bread, and spread slices with butter. Place in greased 13x9x2 baking dish, and set aside. Cook the sausage until browned, stirring to crumble. Spoon over bread slices, and sprinkle with cheese.

Combine the eggs, half and half, and seasonings, and mix well. Pour over the cheese. Cover the dish and refrigerate overnight. Remove from the refrigerator 15 minutes before you're ready to bake, then bake, uncovered, at 350 degrees for 45 minutes or until set. (Eight servings.)

And, don't miss the canned vegetable specials at National, Jitney Jungle and Winn-Dixie. With sliced or button mushrooms, and slivers of lettuce added, canned green peas add a special touch to the menu.

You might combine a can of beets, drained, with whatever quantity of sliced onions you like, and drizzle the salad dressing of your choice over for a tasty salad.

A can of red kidney beans with chopped or sliced onions and celery and seasonings makes a good winter salad, also, in a lettuce-lined bowl, or in lettuce cups.

On Life

By Father Jerome LeDoux, SVD

Read for a minute this scathing report from the "National Enquirer" at the beginning of the first century A.D.:

"Self-proclaimed Messiah being touted prince of the universe.

"A weird psychic, seer, healer, master of legerdemain named Jesus, an obscure native of Galilee, sometime apprentice to his father, known as Joseph the carpenter, is assuming a holier-than-thou attitude and profession quite alien to his background.

"With no formal education, and with no training beyond what his father gave him in the carpenter shop, he is presuming to become a jackleg preacher out to convert everyone to his new philosophy. The burning question everybody is asking is: 'How can anyone of spurious origin and with such a shady background presume to teach others about morals?'"

"It is darkly hinted that David, the wayward king who was a main link in the genealogy of this Jesus, was little more than a regal confidence man who leached what he could out of everyone, outdoing himself in his pursuit of Bathsheba, and the wife of Uriah.

"Backed into a corner by the conception of a child in his adulterous relationship with Bathsheba, he covered up by having Uriah sent to the front lines where he was killed in action. This same adulterer-murderer was a linchpin in the genealogy of said Jesus.

"That spurious genealogy gets worse, if anything. At least, a king has some stature in the community of nations. But what stature does a slut, a hooker have? Rahab was well known to all the townspeople as a common prostitute, as reported in Joshua 2:1. No hooker by pro-

"Though he was in the form of God, he did not deem equality with God something to be grasped at. Rather he emptied himself and took the form of a slave, being born in the likeness of men. He was known to be of fession, Thamar, another ancestor, was nonetheless willing to play hooker in order to snare Judah (Gen. 38:14).

"Inescapably, it becomes evident by perusing his genealogy in the report of Matthew the writer that Jesus was not a pedigree Jew, whatever that may be. His genealogy tells a woeful tale of a promiscuous, ethnically mixed background. By no stretch of the imagination can anyone consider this man the anointed of God!"

So much for the "National Enquirer" of the year 30 A.D. That is the human insight which amounts to little more than ignorance and foolishness when compared to the love and providence of God.

St. Jerome, the great Scripture scholar, observed that these sinful women were mentioned in the genealogy of Jesus to remind us that "He who came for the sake of sinners" was born of sinners. While not true of the other women mentioned, this is certainly true of Thamar and Rahab.

In any case, Jesus' mixed roots, featuring the Canaanites Rahab and Thamar, Ruth the Moabite, and Bathsheba the widow of a Hittite, places a strong emphasis on the universality of salvation. No individual, no nation, no race, no ethnic group is left out of the most coveted prize of all time, in all creation: salvation.

Each year at this time, it comforts us greatly to meditate on St. Paul's magnificent description of our Redeemer's coming:

human estate, and it was thus that he humbled himself" (Phil. 2:6-8).

What a consolation! The Lord of the universe became so much like us that he had skeletons in his closet. Since we with all our limitations could not reach up to God, God reached down to us. Yes, it is going to be all right. It is well with us.

Mormon Tabernacle Choir sings Christmas devotional

The Mormon Tabernacle Choir will furnish the music for a special Christmas devotional to be broadcast to members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints on Sunday, Dec. 3, 1989 at 7 p.m.

A special Christmas message commemorating the birth of the Savior will be given by the First Presidency of the Church.

This devotional is for the entire family, and members and non-members are invited to attend. It will be closed captioned for those with hearing disabilities.

The broadcast will originate from the Mormon Tabernacle on Temple Square in Salt Lake City and will be broadcast via satellite transmission to more than 13,000 members of the church in Mississippi. Church members in many areas of the world will receive the broadcast.

Locally the broadcast can be seen at the Waveland Chapel, McLaurin and Nicholson in Waveland.

Christ Episcopal readies for Centennial Celebration

Christ Episcopal Church begins its year-long Centennial Celebration Sunday, Dec. 3 with a breakfast in Virginia Hall for all members and friends.

Jeff Debenport, chef-in-charge, states that there will be plenty for all, and breakfast will be served from 7:30 to 10:30 a.m.

The Celebration Breakfast menu includes orange juice, pancakes, eggs, bacon or sausage, grits, biscuits and coffee.

The following Sunday, Dec. 10, the Ruth Guild of Christ Episcopal Church will hold a Gourmet Bake Sale and Christmas Boutique. The Centennial Cookbook will be on sale as well as the silver centennial crosses, handmade aprons, hang-it-all-hangers, Christmas angels and other Christmas gift items.

The public is invited to the sale which will be held in Virginia Hall from 9 a.m. until noon Dec. 10.

SENIOR CITIZENS HAPPENINGS

By Eve McDonald

OPEN HOUSE

Friday, Dec. 8 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., the senior citizens will be displaying their arts and crafts at the Senior Citizen Center on Old Spanish Trail. We will have a few items for sale, but mostly we would like for the public to see what our seniors can do and are doing.

Members of each class will be on hand to tell you about their class and craft.

So, come one, come all, and let us how and tell!

CHRISTMAS PARTY

The Bay American Legion Post 139 is again providing a Christmas lunch for the senior citizens at our center and the RSVP volunteers on Dec. 20. Be sure to call 467-9292 and give your name to our office if you plan to come because attendance is limited.

Congratulations to our new Congressman Gene Taylor and our new State Senator Vic Frankiewicz. We are sure we will be well represented with these two fine young men. (Both are interested in senior citizens).

The repeal of the Catastrophic Surtax was a real blessing for many. It also told Congress "don't step on me." I do hope that the good things that were part of the Act will not be lost. We sure don't want widows or widowers losing everything if a spouse has to go into a nursing home or have a long hospital stay.

CENTER CLOSING

The center will be closed Christmas and the day after. We will be open Dec. 27, Wednesday through Friday and will again be closed Monday, Jan. 1.

Christmas Seal campaign begins

In December 1907, on the day the first Christmas Seals went on sale in Philadelphia, a thin, ragged newsboy shoved a penny across the counter in the lobby of the city's leading newspaper and said, "Gimme one—me sister's got it."

The monies from that first fund-raising drive, spearheaded by a Delaware woman, Emily Bissell, went to fight tuberculosis. Today, if that scene was repeated, the "it" would refer to many lung diseases and conditions.

In its 82nd year, the American Lung Association's Christmas Seal Campaign supports the prevention, treatment, and cure of all lung diseases, among them lung cancer, asthma, emphysema, chronic bronchitis, neonatal respiratory distress syndrome, and a host of other respiratory illnesses.

Of the 24.4 million Americans nationwide who are afflicted with chronic lung disease, an estimated 275,000 live and breathe—often with difficulty and pain—right here in Mississippi. They are all ages, from our tiniest infants to our oldest neighbors.

And more than 5,000 die each year, in our state alone, from this, the third most common cause of death, including lung cancer, in the United States.

So, this holiday season, when your Christmas Seals arrive in the mail, please respond generously. You never know who you will be helping, but it's always "A Matter of Life and Breath."

PLANNING COMMITTEE—Women of St. Thomas Episcopal Church in Diamondhead involved in the planning of "A Christmas Garland" presentation are, seated from left,

Mrs. Sam Lawrason and Mrs. Daniel Roridan; standing, Mrs. John N. Stewart III, Mrs. Berlon Dennis and Mrs. Harrie Devine. (Photo by Janet McQueen)

"A Christmas Garland" to be presented Dec. 5

A program of music and narration depicting the birth of Christ will be presented by a trio of accomplished New Orleans performers at St. Thomas Episcopal Church in Diamondhead on Tuesday, December 5.

"A Christmas Garland" will be brought to life by narrator Genevieve Trimble, vocalist Susan Carswell and pianist

Nell Saussy.

The presentation, which will begin at 11 a.m. in the church, is hosted by the Women of St. Thomas Episcopal. The public is invited to attend. St. Thomas is located at 5303 Diamondhead Circle.

Story time program set

Story time programs are presented every Wednesday at 10:30 a.m. at the City-County Library on Hwy. 90 in Bay St. Louis and Fridays at 10:30 a.m. at the Waveland Library on Colman Avenue.

During the month of December, the City-County Library program will include "The Little Christmas Star" by Janet Craig and "The Berenstain Bears' Christmas" by Stan and Jan Berenstain.

In addition to the stories, the children will learn Christmas carols. All pre-school children are invited to participate in the crafts and decorating the tree. Sandra Ladner presents the city-county program and Karen Peoples presents the Waveland program.

For more information, call 467-5282 or 467-9240.
